The Hermit in Lore: Jean Giono's The Man Who Planted Trees. Jean Giono (1895-1970) is perhaps best known to English-language readers for his tale The Man Who Planted Trees, though it was a late work coming after establishing a strong reputation in Europe as a master craftsman of stories that thrive on the sketch or incident. Uniformly, this glimpse of human character in his stories was realist or naturalistic; he was noted for his insightful portraits of fallible humanity.
