Ants have colonised almost every landmass on Earth. The only places lacking indigenous ants are Antarctica and a few remote or inhospitable islands. Ants thrive in most ecosystems and may form 15–25% of the terrestrial animal biomass. Their success in so many environments has been attributed to their social organisation and their ability to modify habitats, tap resources, and defend themselves.

I really enjoyed reading this article; I've never read such an insightful piece on male ants before. I definitely am one of those who fell into the trap of "female ants are so similar because they don't do anything interesting and the only thing we can get from them is their junk", and pretty much dismissed them at that point without really trying to understand them more.
